Your nutrition discipline is already where most people are trying to get — protein every day, sleep dialed in. So this isn't more food rules. It's a clean structure you can run fast, around your schedule.

Your weekly targets

Phase 2 nutrition — protein-forward, fiber carbs, fat at a healthy floor. Calorie target keeps your deficit steady, not aggressive.

CALORIES / DAY

PROTEIN / DAY

The four rules

- 1 • Protein first. Hit your protein number every day. Build each meal around a palm or two of protein before anything else goes on the plate.
- 2 • No liquid sugar. Zero sugary drinks — no soda, juice, milk tea, sweet coffee, or flavored milk. This single rule removes hundreds of hidden calories a day. Water, black coffee, unsweetened tea only.
- 3 • Fiber carbs only, controlled. Carbs come from the fiber list, in set portions, mostly around your training. No white bread, instant noodles, or pastries.
- 4 • Log every meal. Open MyFitnessPal and log it before you eat. We're rebuilding the logging habit — aim for 6 of 7 days. Use the barcode scanner and "Copy Yesterday" to make repeats fast.

This week's movement

RUN / WALK TARGET

12 km

Split into 2–3 easy sessions to total 12 km (e.g. 3 × 4 km).
Keep it time-light — brisk walks count. Steady easy cardio suits you well.

GYM SESSION — RECOMMENDATION

+1 strength day

Adding a short gym strength day protects muscle while you lose fat. Not built yet — message Coach "GYM" and we'll set your loads. It would cover one squat, one hinge, one push, one pull, and a core hold.

YOUR FOCUS

Your one obstacle is time, not food. Each Sunday, block your sessions on off-duty days and treat them as appointments. With PCOS, fat loss can be steady rather than fast — that's biology, not effort. Trust the process and watch the non-scale wins.

Stop guessing. Follow a system.
